

Inspiration for "the good workshop"

Make arrangements with the others in the workshop

Please, contact the other "presentors" before the conference and agree on the succession of the presentations and potential mutual themes of discussion.

Every workshop has two facilitators (the symposiums have one facilitator) to secure the time schedule.

Not only one-way communication

Even if you have a lot to tell and burn for your project, please do not make long monologues ☺

Your presentation must be of a duration of 15 minutes at the most.

Activate the participants

A good workshop requires activity and involvement of the participants.

A classical method for activating the participants is "buzzing with your neighbour" (5-10 minutes). You may start the buzzing with a question on the theme of the workshop.

You can also start with a couple of minutes of silence, in order for the participants to reflect on the theme and structure their thoughts and get good ideas. After the buzzing it is a good idea to ask some of the participants to tell about his/her reflections.

In all circumstances it is a good idea that you have prepared some questions beforehand to start up the debate.

Keep focus

When you prepare your presentation it is important to consider the focus of the conference:
